

Almost the entire medical system as it has become known today, since its beginning, has been built and maintained by deception and ignorance with constant streams of money to help provide and assure the continuance of the system at the expense of other viable, even better, competing systems.

Regardless of this intentional suppression, like Galileo had believed, the truth will eventually prevail. The truth will appear first to those who seek it out.

Fall of the House of Pharma

Toppling the “House of Cards”

PART 2

By Jimmie Holman
& Justin Allen

Anyone who sincerely investigates the situation of implemented control and manipulation initiated directly and indirectly by the power brokers of Big Pharma and industrialized medicine should clearly see the non-response to congressional questioning, the legislated near immunity from civil recourse, and the incredibly condemning formal reports carried out domestically and by foreign governments etc., that show a continuing clear and ever present pattern of abuse.

"People think the FDA is protecting them--it isn't.

What the FDA is doing and what people think it's doing are as different as night and day."

Dr. Herbert Ley, Commissioner of the FDA, San Francisco Chronicle, January 2, 1970

The FDA, the explicit governmental agency specifically mandated with the task of protecting the public, in much of the public's view has become nothing more than the corporate shills for Pharma and much of the commercialized medical industry. The political machine (the politicians) have become little more than the corporate whores. If one thinks these statements a bit too harsh, it is likely they need to look a bit deeper into the situation BEFORE it is too late. According to some, that time may have already past. We choose to be a bit more optimistic.

Most folks incorrectly believe that Pharma or any corporation owes their allegiance to their customers, the purchasing public. While that would be great in an ideal world, the fact is, legally, their primary responsibility is to the stockholders and corporate profits, NOT THE PUBLIC! Any perceived morality propagated through media may be little more than a facade, and when one investigates closely, reports reveal that in actuality, many of the required safety and effectiveness studies they provide are little more than additional examples of deception.

We are witnessing the current system collapsing onto itself ... sort of a self-induced implosion ..., but one fueled by their own greed and deceit. The many good folks that are waking up to alternatives that have been there, but have not been able to be clearly seen as a result of massive and intentional misdirection, deception, withheld information, and outright lies will be the first to realize, utilize, and appreciate benefits of what the "lost art" of real healing has to offer.

WHERE WE ARE

Major authorities of the conventional medical industry (i.e. FDA, CDC, AMA, FAO, etc.) have been hiding behind the facade of protecting public health. These institutions, by the manipulation of Pharma, have really been working together to help generate the greatest profit while submitting the public to the effects of the well-marketed system of prescription drugs and commercialized medical routines which normally carry potentially negative effects. Over recent years, there has been much made public about very concerning issues within these entities, most especially the FDA. Scientists, doctors, and even high-level management have all been groups to come forward and admit that the misinformed public has been manipulated by the pharmaceutical and medical industries into believing that health care and taking prescription medications or using invasive routines are one in the same. This couldn't be more incorrect. Genuine health care includes actual care for the individual body and also taking healthy steps toward preventing illness or injury. This means treating the body well through nutritional dieting and healthy amounts of activity. It is also important to make sure to receive plenty of vitamins and micronutrients; none of which are supplied through the use of chemical prescriptions.

As there have been many excellent modern advancements in technology, the time it takes to accomplish many regular tasks has been greatly reduced. With the increase in pace of daily life, the demand for the fastest results to any process has become its strongest. This demand for immediate responsiveness to any need has, unfortunately, also found its way into the field of conventional health care. It has been taken advantage of to perpetuate the idea of someday having a “quick fix” pill or antidote that would eradicate health problems in an instant. However, this ultimately endless pursuit only leads physicians to further dismiss and ignore the capabilities of holistic methods, which have been utilized for thousands of years. It also distracts many from considering that the actual repair necessary to accomplish a full recovery of health will always take time, and always much more time than is needed for significant damage to be done. With the many pollutants and toxins that humans are exposed to regularly, it doesn’t take much to cause damage at any degree. Sudden responses to the chronic exposure to (and also, very likely, the consumption of) these toxins or pathogens send panicked citizens to their physicians worried over their symptoms yet hopeful to be given a solution. However, the “solution” normally ordered is not curative at all, but is, in fact, just that: a chemical solution – inorganic and capable of causing adverse reactions (severe reactions in some cases). If the body does not accept it, it cannot heal the body. Many patients of the conventional medical system are realizing this now. While the FDA and its fellow medical agencies push legislation through Congress as the pharmaceutical industry continues to generate addiction and new “side effects”, groups of thousands mistreated by this system are piling their frustrations together and speaking out in order to bring change to American health care and hopefully topple the house of cards built around these harmful industries.

CONTINUING ISSUES WITHIN THE MEDICAL INDUSTRY

As was discussed in Pulsed Technologies’ previous article, “Fall of the House of Pharma: A Modern Day House of Cards, Part I”, there has been some very interesting activity within the giant conventional medical community recently. In 2008, a group of nine FDA scientists wrote to Michigan Rep. John Dingell and to President Barack Obama in 2009, accusing FDA managers of corruption. The scientists mentioned that they and others had been intimidated, coerced, and even threatened to manipulate research. Managers were also politically motivated to pressure scientists for the approval of medical devices they had originally determined as unsafe.

With the informed public becoming even more concerned over the vaccine controversy, we saw recently, Dr. Julie Gerberding’s sale of 38,368 of her personal Merck stock shares for $2.3 million⁸. Dr. Gerberding, once in charge of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), is now the president of Merck’s Vaccine division. Merck is one of the largest pharmaceutical companies in the world, and the supplier of the largest number of vaccines the CDC recommends. Last year, Dr. Bernard Dalbergue, a former pharmaceutical industry physician with Merck, revealed to the French magazine Principes de Sante (Health Principles) that he believes the company’s Gardasil vaccine – which has been linked to controversy over its efficacy and potential harmful side effects – will become the greatest medical scandal of all time. “Gardasil is useless and costs a fortune!” Dalbergue claims. “Decision-makers at all levels are aware of it!”⁹ From this perspective it almost seems that Dr. Gerberding may be abandoning a sinking ship, so to speak. The growing list of serious and concerning issues, along with many revealing accounts which should be embarrassing along with others that can be found (such as the fact that the American government does receive royalties from the sale of Gardasil vaccines^{10 11}), have increased the awareness of many citizens when it comes to their dealings with conventional health care, and how they would begin to define it.

However, legal issues such as corruption, subversion, cronyism, potential racketeering, and a wink at what may seem as insider trading aren't the only issues within the market of conventional medicine. Actually, the conventional medicines themselves, which are constantly promoted as new innovations toward recovery, are the industry's biggest problem. All pharmaceuticals contain chemicals typically derived in part from petroleum-based feedstocks; some of these chemical blends help to suspend any natural ingredients (of which there is typically an ineffective amount) that may be used. Those inorganic chemicals and others within the medicines (such as mercury preservatives, etc.) are often carcinogenic and can have a great negative impact on individual health. Some have referred to these inorganic pharmaceuticals as "parasitic", robbing and stealing cells of their vital electrons – more knowledge is spreading about the effect of these electrons and how certain wholesome foods, natural supplements such as Vitamin C, and certain energetic procedures are helping many regain their depleted electrons and assist optimal metabolism to bring back desired health.

PHARMA INADVERTANTLY PROVIDING THE KEY

It may be somewhat ironic that the chemical "theft" of electrons described above may actually be the universal key to helping correct many dysfunctions NATURALLY and via very simple means using concepts readily available, just as effective, and at very low cost.

Doctor Linus Pauling was a two-time Nobel Prize winner and one of the founders of the fields of quantum chemistry and molecular biology. His work also included the extensive investigation into orthomolecular medicine, megavitamin therapy, and dietary supplements. However, Dr. Pauling's work with vitamin C was especially important in that it revealed the electrical (electron) nature and importance of these studied substances. It should be noted these latter listed efforts have NOT gained acceptance in the mainstream medical/scientific community¹² although more and more evidence is emerging that he was right all along.¹³

Dr. Thomas E. Levy aptly elaborated: "Another way of viewing this is that brisk electron flow and interchange equals health, impaired or poor electron flow and interchange equals disease, and cessation of flow and interchange equals death. Vitamin C, as the premier antioxidant in the body, is perhaps the most important ongoing electron donor to keep this electron flow at optimal levels." Levy says that, "Vitamin C, which is water soluble, helps to recharge oxidized vitamin E in those cell membranes back to the electron-rich reduced form. Even though vitamin C is not the primary antioxidant in the cell wall, it plays a vital role in maintaining the optimal levels of the metabolically active antioxidant, vitamin E, at that site."¹⁴

Hippocrates' statement over 2000 years ago, "Let food be thy medicine and medicine be thy food" is as valid now as it was then. The fact is, the organic foods available then were abundant with not only the nutritional components, but the bioavailable energy (aka. electrons).

Disease is never a result of a pharmaceutical deficiency!

OLD ADVANCEMENTS FOR THE NEW AGE

When time is taken to reconsider what the term “health care” truly means, or what it should accomplish, the most logical treatment is to provide not only the much desired relief from illness or injury, but also to address the underlying mechanisms and provide the energetic resources of self-repair and prevention of future infection via a strong and healthy immune system.

Nikola Tesla, the inventor who brought us modern electricity, even in the late 1800's, was aware of the importance of therapeutic electricity, and the importance of introducing it to mainstream medicine. He also publically commented about the need for those working in the field of technical science (electricians) to collaborate with those of the healing art (doctors), before anything really productive would come of it. The sum of such cooperation could – and most likely would – rearrange everything that was generally understood about human health.

While it remained for the physician to investigate the specific actions on the organism and indicate proper methods of treatment, the various ways of applying these currents to the body of a patient suggested themselves readily to the electrician¹⁵

Nikola Tesla, 1898

With this same strategy, innovative companies such as Pulsed Technologies are working together with select researchers and practitioners to help make it possible for end users to understand and receive the benefits of holistic, conventional, and innovative medical disciplines. With further innovations and education in the field of alternative modalities, a more comprehensive mindset leading to a new age of medicine can be ushered in. Those who have already been introduced to these alternative concepts and methods are certainly aware that what they previously understood as “recovery” or “treatment” as defined by the conventional model of medicine, is actually a wide miss from what should be the intended goal. However, this information can be spread and reach more people with the help of many who experienced successful recoveries, their helpful practitioners, and others they know. As numbers of informed individuals and groups would grow in strength through their education of health and treatment, so would the movement to transition and expand to a new, effective, and complementary system of self-care.

The ELECTRICAL nature of physiology is being rediscovered. When one closely evaluates and recognizes the mechanisms in use, the wisdom of the ages becomes apparent. The complications introduced by the pharmacological model are often unnecessarily dangerous and have taken an immeasurable toll on public health, all for the apparent sake of the return on investment.

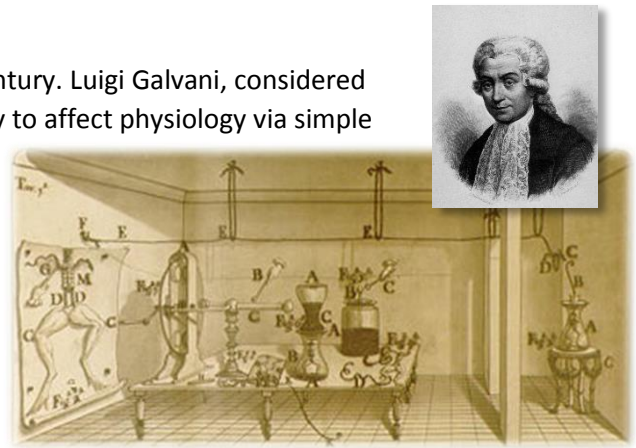

However, as when Galileo presented that the Earth is not the center of the universe, opposition to truth can only maintain itself for so long before an increasingly educated public submits itself to reason and abandons false ideas imposed by a self-established authority, whose motives have been perpetuated by control through deception. The pharmaceutical industry, backed by government agencies and officials, who's excessive funds for advertising and fixed “research” (which is more like politically motivated pseudo-science) has situated itself in the same position as those who carried out the inquisition against Galileo hundreds of years ago. Yet, as further progress in alternative medicine is made, and as old advancements continue to be reintroduced to alternative treatments, it will become more apparent that what has been upheld by so many as health care is, in fact, just the opposite.

As people learn more about the risks of modern treatments, its growing ineffectiveness, and other sour topics such as the corruption within the entities responsible for guarding public health, they will realize serious alternatives exist. The House of Pharma seems not so substantial at all then. When one understands and begins to utilize even a few simple healthy adjustments within their daily lives while avoiding the prongs of the pharma model, the “house” begins to topple.

¹⁵ Tesla, Nikola, High Frequency Oscillators for Electro-Therapeutic and Other Purposes presentation to the American Electro-Therapeutic Association, Buffalo, NY, Sept 15, 1898

A "NEW AGE" OF HEALTH AND WELLNESS

The electrical nature of physiology has been known for over a century. Luigi Galvani, considered the father of electrophysiology, revealed this long ago. The ability to affect physiology via simple electromagnetic or energetic means has been utilized by man for millennia, even before magnetism or electricity were discovered or understood. Despite that such information has not been taught to doctors or the public, the fact is virtually all chemical processes rely on electrical charges. The human body, each cell, metabolic process, and almost every communicated signal relies on electron availability and flow. Electrons are the valued "currency" of all these things.

The "laws of physics" do not change or cease to exist once inside the jurisdiction of FDA ... they know few boundaries. The energies described in ancient medicine are valid and shouldn't be ignored or dismissed as is often done today by western medicine, being criticized or dismissed long before a fair trial can be conducted within a system which has a vested financial interest to keep such competition OUT of that monopolistic system! However, many today out of sheer desperation or better personal research are finding the ancient and new alternative methods valid and valuable when examined within today's science ... just not today's "trained medicine system".

Note: One individual doing his best to help educate others about the many disturbing issues within the realm of conventional medicine is reporter Tim Bolen. An activist in his own right, he has written much to expose the darker side of politics, and the manipulated organizations within the corrupted medical industry. He regularly publishes up-to-date articles of interest on his blog website: www.bolenreport.com. His website has been garnering much attention lately as more people seek to enlighten themselves about how the industry truly affects them.

By examining and listening to the methods and messages of yesteryear through the prism of today's physics, incredible things are possible! As people and practitioners are becoming more technically educated, these electrical concepts become more logical, natural, and useful in addressing their personal issues.

For many reasons, Pulsed Technologies would agree with the idea that much of today's issues can be attributed to electron availability flow or lack thereof. When one accepts the electrical nature of the Human and its dysfunction as largely an absence or deficiency of electrons, SO many very economical possibilities become available without the current expensive conventional approaches. As the public becomes more and more aware of the more natural processes and easy solutions, the conventional pharmaceutical system begins to look old, stale, and very limited, but mostly dangerous.

PUBLIC ENLIGHTENMENT CAN BRING ON A "NEW AGE" OF MEDICINE

The conventional system is overpricing itself that it is to the point of collapsing the system. If one's intent was farming people as a source of income, extracting as much wealth as possible, providing as little investment as possible, keeping that public as docile and manageable as possible, keeping them contained within an overly controlled (regulated) environment (removing any alternative options), and then simply disposing of them when they can no longer provide anything of value, I think we might have a system very similar to what we see now. Almost the entire industrial medical system as it has become known today, since its beginning, has been built and maintained by deception and induced ignorance. Constant streams of money help provide and assure the continuance of the system at the expense of other viable, but competing systems. Regardless of this intentional suppression, like Galileo had believed, the truth will eventually prevail. The truth will appear first to those who seek it out.

That which is genuine in the promotion of health can and should remain as the foundation upon which a system that uses more positive methods and medicines can be built. There is no wonder why these alternative solutions have consistently been so aggressively and methodically suppressed. The simple but powerful solution to adjust such changes in health care would include use of the aged revelation of the highly electrical – as opposed to exclusively chemical – nature of the human body. The corporate and business “hold” has relied heavily on the patentability and protection of unique chemical compounds and molecules and, of course, the exclusive rights of distribution and application of their approved treatments or medicines. Even though every molecular and atomic change, either in the body or in the lab, requires the presence of electrical change, we have been so distracted by modern pharmaceutical “science” that we, as a culture, have forgotten or never learned about the (body’s) energetic aspects. Energy = Electrical!

TOPPLING THE HOUSE OF CARDS

What is difficult to realize at first is that the conventional medical system that influences so much today, is actually quite fragile and maintained with continued deception, public ignorance, and overwhelming funding. Tackling such a force, understandably, would seem impossible. However, it would only take some pressure from those looking to new health care methods who know that in order to fully reclaim the nation’s health, the current medical system must be toppled and rebuilt from its foundation, which is: treating patients to full recovery of optimal health.

The fact is, many people ARE looking and asking questions when conventional medicine has failed them, and it is continuing to fail more and more often. There ARE many good aspects of conventional medicine today. We would NEVER want to deny or impede that! Tried and true methods, procedures, and even many pharmaceutical medicines deserve a well-earned and rightful place in a foundation of “new medicine”. What they do not need is the bureaucratic, regulatory system of the behemoth, Big Pharma, to sustain itself.

There is a solution to the dilemma we face. It is actually already occurring. If you have read this far, YOU are almost certainly part of the solution. The “gust of wind” needed to help topple the fragile behemoth of Big Pharma is your thoughtful sharing of what you learn; the KNOWLEDGE and ENLIGHTENMENT BY and OF the people.

*Never doubt that a small group of thoughtful, committed citizens can change the world.
Indeed, it is the only thing that ever has.*
